SALFORD

versus

OLDHAM

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1958.

Kick-off 3 p.m.

VISIT OF THE LEAGUE LEADERS.

Powerful Oldham promise to provide us with a thriller.

We have recently been in distinguished company. A fortnight ago it was our pleasure to entertain St. Helens, powerful and attractive runners up for the Lancashire Cup and holders of the second place in the Championship.

Then we had the never-to-be-forgotten experience of playing Leeds, the Yorkshire Cup winners, under floodlight on Manchester United's ground.

To-day we challenge our old friends from Oldham, who have not only won the Lancashire Cup, but are League Championship leaders.

Tough going perhaps, but, judged by our performance at Leigh, we have obviously benefited. The signing of John McGuinness had added considerable power to the forwards and Oldham will have to be at their best to beat us.

Recently Oldham signed Irish international Rugby Union wing threequarter, Sean Quinlan, but it is not expected that he will make his professional debut today. But what is one personality among so many. They are a star-studded side captained by Bernard Ganley, an ace goalkicker, who has amongst his colleagues the brilliant Frank Pitchford, one of the best half backs in the game ; Alan Davies, who has no superior as a centre threequarter, and a pack of powerful forwards second to none with Derek Turner, Ken Jackson and Charlie Winslade the key men.

Alan Kellett, the former Halifax player, has had a wonderfully successful season. Dick Cracknell, on the left wing has lost none of his skill or pace, while Jack Keith, their hooker, has also won praise for his work in the open which is Oldham's aim to reveal their powers. Given dry conditions it should be a thriller.

HOW TO DO IT!

Writing in Harry Jefferies' Australian Rugby League Year Book, Duncan Thompson, a brilliant half back in his day, says:

"A team of 13 players will beat 13 individuals. How do we get it? Players must be developed mentally. They must be taught to think.

"Rugby League is a game of brains as well as brawn. Any player with the necessary desire and will power can get himself physically fit, but the coach must get him mentally fit. To do this successfully the coach must teach his players:—

- 1.—How to draw the man before passing the ball.
- 2.—How to take the defence one way and the attack the other.
- 3.—The field is only 75 yards wide. Every yard across field eats up yards.
- 4.—Forwards should not run off rucks at an angle (against good defences) except for variety.
- 5.—The half back must not run an inch with the ball if the ball is to be got through to the wing from a set scrum.
- 6.—Possession of the ball is all important, so carry the ball in the hands for quick transfer—not under the arm.
- 7.—Stay on your feet; don't go to ground with the ball.
- 8.—A try is made by one yard, but may be scored by running 50 or more yards. Find the value of a yard, convert it to time. Thus: a man runs 100 yards in 12 secs.—equals 8 yards in 1 sec.—1 yard in  $\frac{1}{8}$  of a second.
- 9.—Now, find how many ways in which a player, when he gets the ball, can waste  $\frac{1}{8}$  of a second which closes up an opening which may have made a try. Example: Fumbling the ball before passing, or by movement to the left of the body, if the ball is passed to the right.
Another example: A pass thrown at the hip loses time while the catcher turns to catch it, then turns to the front again.
N.B.—The ball should always be passed in front of the body.
Another example: Half back picks up the ball then stands up before passing it.
- 10.—Forwards fight to get possession only to find (on breaking up) a back has been caught in possession—why? All the  $\frac{1}{8}$  of seconds lost has enabled the defensive backs to get on top of the attack—This is the cancer of Rugby.

11.—The answer is : The lecture on variety. If the attacking team's centres are to make tries (which is their job) they must have room in which to move when they get the ball from the two half backs. To do this, the opposing or defending centres must be in doubt whether to move up or out. This doubt is created by the variety of play of the half backs.

12. Speed, Speed, Speed. Must have speed of action in :—
 (a) Hooking the ball.
 (b) Passing from base of scrum or ruck.
 (c) Running with the ball (Don't dawdle). Run. If you are slow, give the ball to a fast ball carrier.

13. Back play may be summed up thus :—
 There are two halves, two centres, two wings.
 The halves create the necessary variety, to give the centres room to move, for the wingers to score the tries.
